Creating A School Foundation: How To Develop New Funding Sources for Your District

Discover new ways to raise money for your school district by creating your own nonprofit foundation that builds support for schools in the community. Creating a School Foundation: How to Develop New Funding Sources for Your District outlines the benefits of starting a foundation and how to focus attention on the schools and their needs.

This step-by-step, how-to book will help you develop a mission statement; recruit a board of directors; handle legal and financial paperwork; file for tax-exempt status; create bylaws; and file tax returns. Plus you'll read firsthand experiences of districts that have foundations in place and see how they have tapped resources in the business community to help generate ideas and money for improving schools.

Your school foundation can use its money to fund new programs, purchase equipment, provide reference materials in media centers, save important programs, build a much-needed facility, and more.

Creating a School Foundation contains appendices with names and phone numbers of school foundation representatives, accountants, attorneys and consultants who can help you get the ball rolling.

Grants Seminars

Evaluation Management for Grantseekers: How to Turn a Solid Evaluation Plan into More Grant Dollars, September 14-15, 1992, Washington, DC. This step-by-step seminar will walk you through the entire evaluation process, a crucial part of a successful proposal. You'll learn what type of evaluation to use based on your objectives for the evaluation; how to gather and analyze data to evaluate your program; when to use in-house evaluations and what to expect from a professional external evaluator; how to organize and manage an evaluation; how to make the findings meaningful; and more. The registration fee is $495 per person.

Education Reports

Proven Practice: What's Working in Today's Schools. Find out how your colleagues have faced the challenges of providing a quality education for all students with examples of strategies, practices and solutions for improving school performance. Each program profile is an independent, unbiased report of what's working when reforming school structures, developing curricula, working with parents, supporting at-risk students, and more. Arranged by subject in an easy-to-use format the book contains information about the contact and tips, strategies, follow-up resources and research studies. $46.00
